

Abstract

The invention relates to processes for preparing derivatized and partially derivatized polymethacrylimides. The properties of the material can be adjusted by appropriate selection of the derivatization, in terms of number and type.